Wine served from a keg rather than a bottle reduces packaging waste and ensures optimal freshness. Plus, it's quicker for staff to pour wine from a keg than pop open a bottle. Here are five restaurants serving wine on tap so you can sip smartly.

Bleu Boheme, San Diego, California

Since Bleu Boheme sells many of its wines as quarter, half, and full carafes, wine on tap provided by the local Fallbrook Winery made sense. "I like, too, that it lowers our carbon footprint as there are no boxes, foil wraps, corks, and labels," explains owner and executive chef Ken Irvine. "The other benefit is consistency of product."
